Monday

Practise reading these words:

great

break

steak

Discussion - How can we change these words to past tense...

move -->

study -->

plan -->

Now, change these words to past tense...

run -->

speak -->

write -->

see -->

The same rules don't apply to these verbs.
We call them irregular verbs.
Can you think of any more?

Ask a grown up to read these sentences out loud while you write them without looking.

The girl said happy birthday.

I saw a fish who swam in the sea and I wrote a story about it.

The fish looked happy because he thought the sea was beautiful.

Which words make these sentences past tense?

Tuesday

Practise reading these words and then practise writing them without looking...

great

break

steak

What is a phoneme?

What is a phoneme?

A phoneme is a sound made up of graphemes.
A grapheme is a letter or group of letters that represent the sound. For example 'a', 'oa', 'ow'or 'igh'.

If we understand why a word is spelt in a particular way, it can help us to remember how to spell these words accurately in our writing.

Remember:

- How many syllables?

- How many phonemes has it got?

- What tense is it?

- Is it similar to any related words?

We are going to describe the spelling patterns of some words.

their

'Their' has one syllable. It has two phonemes. It starts with 'the' like the related words 'they' and 'their'.

If we understand why a word is spelt in a particular way, it can help us to remember how to spell these words accurately in our writing.

Remember:

- How many syllables?

- How many phonemes has it got?

- What tense is it?

- Is it similar to any related words?

We are going to describe the spelling patterns of some words.

wanted

If we understand why a word is spelt in a particular way, it can help us to remember how to spell these words accurately in our writing.

Remember:

- How many syllables?

- How many phonemes has it got?

- What tense is it?

- Is it similar to any related words?

We are going to describe the spelling patterns of some words.

played

If we understand why a word is spelt in a particular way, it can help us to remember how to spell these words accurately in our writing.

Remember:

- How many syllables?

- How many phonemes has it got?

- What tense is it?

- Is it similar to any related words?

We are going to describe the spelling patterns of some words.

children

Can you match the word to its description?

kind

something that's

This word has two syllables. It has 6 phonemes. It is a compound word, meaning it is two seperate words stuck together to make a new word and one of the words is a common exception word.

This word has one syllable. It has 4 phonemes and is a contraction word, meaning some letters are missing and have been replaced with an apostrophe.

This word has one syllable. It has 4 phonemes. It follows the same spelling pattern as 'mind' and 'behind'.

Wednesday

Practise reading these words:

every

pretty

beautiful

Make these sentences past tense and write them in your book.

I wash the dishes.

_____

He walks to school.

_____

They run all the way home.

_____

Thursday

Practise reading these words and then practise writing them without looking:

every

pretty

beautiful

Ask an adult to read the sentences for you to write.

They are in the past tense and we will look at them together after.

Before school, I woke up, washed my face and brushed my teeth. After that, I got dressed and ate my breakfast. I was ready with plenty of time, so I walked to school.

Can you use a coloured pencil to underline the words that show us these sentences are past tense?